Text: Matthew 3:1-10 (NLT)

The second Mary can be found in Luke 1:26-45. We read about a young virgin's life turned upside down with the potential of being ostracised by the society. The striking thing was that God gave Mary a choice and she accepted the uncertain future (Luke 1:38). From then, she lived for Christ and her life never remained the same again.

Living for Christ is not always the easiest thing to do, but it's the only choice worth making. We may become tired, stressed or discouraged, but there are lessons and joys in serving and the bible promised greater rewards from God. So, let's persist in prayers and in serving God.

Bottom line:

Living for Christ means making life choices where we put him first, and everything is from the viewpoint of Christ. Ask yourself each time you do anything: Is it going to make you happy or glorify God? We must learn to sit at Jesus' feet like Mary and be with him.

Prove by the way you live

Text: Matthew 3:1-10 (NLT)

We will begin a series on the portraits of Jesus in the gospel today. The book of Matthew begins with the genealogy of Jesus, but we'll skip that for now and start with the cameo in this text about the life of John the Baptist. The scripture said out of a barren desert, a wilderness came an important voice: John's. It was the last place you would expect something like that. It shows that we can sometimes find value in places where we don't expect to find them. And we can find God in ways or places we can't imagine too.

But our focus is on the Pharisees and Sadducees. The bible said you'll often find them in synagogues, street corners and places where they could be seen (Matt 6:5). But in this instance, they left those places behind and sought the barren wasteland or wilderness John have made his home in; and even John was surprised, asking them "Who warned you to flee the coming wrath? Prove by the way you live that you have repented of your sins and turned to God."

That's the key message for us today. Jesus said by their fruit you shall know them (Matt 7:16). A gospel that doesn't change the way we live is not really the good news. We must prove by the way we live that we love and believe in Christ.

Living for Christ was the most crucial part of Paul's life. And for Paul, an important part of that means helping others to grow in the knowledge of Christ, to invest in others and add value to their lives (Gal 2:17-20; Phil 1:20-25). As we considered this morning, living for Christ involves commitment. Everything in our lives should be about Christ.

We may recall the story of how David expressed desire for water from his hometown once when he was thirsty. "Oh, if only I could have some water from that well by the gate in Bethlehem..." he cried. Three of his followers heard and they fought their way through the Philistine army to get the water for him from a well near the city gate in Bethlehem. David appreciated their sacrifice, and felt he couldn't drink it. He poured it on the ground as an offering to the Lord instead. We can commend and learn from these brave men's devotion to their master (2 Sam 23:15-17).

When we live for our own personal happiness and push away everything that doesn't make us happy, we must ask ourselves if that's compatible with living for Christ. We may have the idea that pleasing God means denying ourselves (Luke 9:23). But why do the two have to be mutually exclusive? We can make the decision to align our lives with Christ, tying our personal happiness to him and things that pleases him.

In illustration, let's take a look at two Marys in the bible. The first is in Luke 10:38-42. Mary's sister, Martha was so busy preparing food to care for Jesus. Stressed, she asked Jesus to compel Mary to help her. But Jesus commended Mary for choosing to be with him and sit at his feet.
