FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

Seeds and harvest

Text: Genesis 8:20-22

When we interpret the scripture, we need to be careful. I once came across an interpretation of Mark 16:17-20. The writer was asserting that the signs following people are the things they believe, because the text said miraculous signs shall follow those who believe. In other words, if you stop believing in COVID for example, you will not be affected it.

One question we may ask is if we don't believe in the rain, can we stop it? Can anyone stop air from blowing just by not believing air exists? It is simplistic and impracticable. Likewise, the phrase "seedtime and harvest ... shall not cease" has often been seen or translated as supporting scripture for prosperity or receiving from God. The truth is it's much more than that.

We can see an illustration in the parable. Jesus told his disciples about a sower and seeds yielding or not yielding fruits as expected when planted. This shows there are conditions to be met before there's increase and harvesting (Luke 8:4-8; 10-15).

We've all been given the same time. Some of us use a part of it to invest. A farmer knows if he doesn't sow, there'll be no harvest. We must learn to sow seeds too, to enjoy times of harvest. When we have plenty, we need to sow, for example into the kingdom of God or to support others who may need us to. Investing wisely in the period of plenty will ensure a bountiful harvest later (2 Cor 9:6-15).

Therefore, a sound financial principle we all should cultivate for the kingdom is about preparing for the future by saving or investing. God's grace always abounds towards us. But this year, let's identify our seeds and sow in time of plenty. Remember, we can only plant when there's peace. In times of stress or trouble, we pray for a turn-around so we can have peace and plant into our future.

Bottom line:

This year, let's make a deliberate effort to know our seeds and invest wisely into the kingdom of heaven and our walk with God.
