FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

Portrait of Jesus (Part I)

Text: Matthew 4:12-17

Many of us are reluctant to preach in the open because we're unsure of the reception we might get or feel we're not qualified. Spare a thought today for missionaries and pastors who do that without hesitation. This is what Jesus demonstrated for us in today's text.

Until the end of his ministry on earth, he would preach to others at every opportunity even when they abuse, rejected, insulted or threaten him. It wasn't always convenient for him, earning criticisms even from members of his family (Jn 7:3-5), but he never stopped preaching, calling for everyone to repent.

And that's the command he gave us (Mk 16:15-16). Paul was compelled by this command, even cursing himself if he doesn't obey (1 Cor 9:16-18). As Christians, the primary responsibility we're given is to preach and the simplest way is to point people to Christ (Matt 3:11; Jn 1:35-46).

The reason we're all Christians today is because someone told us or preached to us (Rom 10:14-15). These days, we have a myriad number of ways including through the social media and other more traditional means. But the most effective way of preaching is by example. In fact, when we fail in leading by example, any other tool we use may be less than effective.

That's why Paul said the most effective letter we can write about the gospel of Christ is our lives (2 Cor 3:1-3). Tracts can be thrown away. Posts on social media could be ignored. But when Christ's image is seen in our lives, it is unlikely that people can ignore that for any length of time (Matt 5:13-16). They will also notice when our lives are not depicting a good representation of Jesus's life.

When Jesus began to preach, he not only used his mouth, but he did it with his life too. Many followed because of what they saw in his life. Some couldn't pay the cost, with mixed results (Matt 8:19-20; 19:16-22). Others sought him out and he saved and taught them, including Nicodemus, Zacchaeus and several of his disciples (Jn 3:1-8; 1:35-46; Lk 19:1-10).

Bottom line:

People should be able to see that we're Christians from our lifestyles. We must be conscious that people are watching us and reading from our words and actions and ensure people see Jesus and not a life that is incompatible with what we preach with our mouths.
