FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

A transformed life

Text: Colossians 1:1-6

An introduction to an exposition on the book of Colossians explains that the mainstay of each of Paul's greater epistles has in it one salient thought. To the Romans, it's justification by faith, to the Ephesians, the mystical union of Christ and his church, to the Philippians, the joy of Christian progress, but to the Colossians, the emphasis is on the dignity and sole sufficiency of Jesus Christ as the mediator and the head of all creator and the church.

The book of Colossians is one of Paul's prison epistles and the lack of personal references may imply he didn't start the church. Our text today says the good news that came to us has gone all over the world, bearing fruit and changing lives. That suggests therefore that if the gospel is not bearing fruit, it isn't effective. Until truth is understood, it cannot change anything. Like a hymn says, the knowledge of God's glory will cover the earth as the water covers the seas. It is not mystical or abstract. Somewhere right now, someone is carrying or spreading it.

The word of God tells us we've been guaranteed a confident assurance by the Holy Spirit (Eph 4:25-32). So, the gospel is not telling us to do something so we can be saved, but because we're saved. There must be a before and after in our lives and a clear demarcation between them. Just saying we're saved doesn't mean anything until it shows in our behaviour and life-style (Lk 3:7-14; 1 Cor 6:9-11) and the change must be not only in life, but in death (1 Cor 15:42-58).

There's a practice in some churches of giving baptismal names to indicate they're no longer the same person. The same happens in a different form when Saul becomes Paul after his conversion (Acts 9:1-19) and Simon was named Peter by Jesus (Jn 1:42). If we all look at our lives, we should be able to pin-point a time when the trajectory changed who we used to be died.

If the fruit of the gospel is not apparent in us, then we need to question whether we've allowed it to transform our lives. God wants to transform us into new people by changing the way we think (Rom 12:1-2 – NLT; Pro 4:23-27 – GNT). God knows the thoughts of man (Jn 1:48). We see a physical manifestation and illustration of this on the mount of transfiguration (Matt 17:1-5). Everything pales into insignificance beside a transformed life.

However, it is a gradual process and incremental as we become transformed into the image of God's son, Jesus (2 Cor 3:16-18; 13:11-12). We often hear prayer changes things, but what it actually changes is us, until we're transformed enough to partner with God so he can achieve his purpose in us. As we begin to know God more, we begin to do great exploits in our understanding (Col 1:9-10). Before God could work through Abram, he had to become Abraham (Gen 17:1-8) and a man willing to sacrifice his only son, who was promised to him by God (Gen 22:1-14).

Bottom line:

God is going to do great things through us this year. But for that to occur, we must be renewed and transformed daily by his word (Rom 12:2). Then we can accomplish great things for God.
