FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

Christ must be first in everything

Text: Colossians 1:18

Our theme for this year is to enlarge and to build better and it is always a good problem when we find we have more than the capacity we have. When Jesus fed thousands, he ensured the excess food is not wasted. It is often the case that we think we need much before we can feel blessed and we find it easier to ignore what we have and concentrate on what we don't have. We see the same thing in the parable of the talents. Like the man that was given one talent, we bury and fail to use whatever we do have (Matt 25:14-30).

The book of Colossians have been challenging us a lot in recent times. In our text today, we're told Christ is first in everything. That is to say he holds the first place. Jesus once met some people who told him they had other things to do first before they can follow him and he challenged each of their priorities. This is because nothing can come first before Jesus Christ (Lk 9:57-62).

Sometimes, Jesus is just one of many solutions when we come to him. Here, we're told he must be first. When Jesus said it is harder for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven, it's not because he hates wealth. He knows that means there's a choice and so many other considerations before the kingdom. He went on to say he must be number one and not one of the many things he can give us (Matt 19:23-30).

It is interesting that Abraham was willing to give back the child he'd waited years for without question. That's because he trusted that God who gave him Isaac can give him another son (Gen 22:1-14). The way we handle and face crises often reveal if he's number one in our lives. Elisha got rid of everything leading back to his old life (1 Ks 19:19-21). It suggests that he was never going back and he made sure of it.

The problem with us is that we always have options to go return to. The Israelites had the same problem and would always cry for what they had before (Exo 2:23-25). Even so, the bible said God understood (Exo 2:25). After Jesus was crucified, the disciples were the same too. They went back to fishing (Jn 21:1-4). Peter forgot he met Jesus at a low point in his life, when he had fished all night and caught nothing (Luke 5:5-8).

God cannot revolve around our options. We cannot ask him to sanction what we desire or want. He must be first. The book of Job showed us a man who went through one of the most challenging periods and suffered depression. He was rich and had so many children, but was reduced to having nothing and no one to depend on. However, one saving grace for him is that God is first and foremost in his life (Job 1:21).

Bottom line:

Let's remember that our real life is in Christ. He never calls us to suffer, but to live our real life in Christ, we cannot have other options. He must be first and foremost in everything. It must be an everyday decision for us, from the moment we wake up.
