FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

False identities

Text: Colossians 1:18-23

In John 8:2-11, Jesus challenged a crowd asking him to judge a woman they considered a sinner. He told them to stone the woman if they're without any sin. One thing we can see learn from the incident is that he wasn't talking to his disciples. So, why is it that we use this text to guilt-trip ourselves? When Paul said "all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" to the Romans, do we notice he was talking about Christians in a generic sense (Rom 3:23)? The same goes for Isaiah's statement that our "righteousnesses are as filthy rags" (Isa 64:6) or in James 5:16, when we're told to confess our sins.

In Numbers 21:4-9, the Israelites sinned yet again and were punished with fiery serpents. When they cried to God, he set up a bronze serpent and told them to look up at it for salvation. He did the same with Jesus, for us. All we had to do to be saved is to look upon him (Rom 8:1-3). When we're connected to Christ, his truth should set us free, but the fact is we often look into the word of God and forget (Js 1:22-25). The mirror of God's word should show us the way God sees us and we can see that in our text today. God sees us as "holy, and blameless, and above reproach" (Col 1:22).

One of the heavy burdens we carry around with us is guilt. Like David after he took Bathsheba as his wife, we feel we don't have a right to approach God (2 Sam 12:7-13a; Psa 51:1-17). So we run to others to act as go-between, because we believe they're holier. The truth is that God sees us the way Solomon sees his love in Songs 4:7. Note God's response to David when Nathan confronted him (2 Sam 12:13b-14).

We are not talking about sinless perfection. We must set ourselves free from guilt and constant fear of punishment. With God, it's not carrot and stick. He tells us who and what he is and we become transformed into his image. We sin because we try to fulfil an image that does not exist. It is why Satan was able to convince Eve to disobey God (Gen 3:1-4).

The bible teaches us that Jesus died for our sins, once and for all time (Rom 6:10). This may be a challenging concept to accept, but it's the truth and we need to believe it (Col 1:23). The Israelites never saw themselves as God saw them (Num 23:8; 21). Therefore, they continued to sin and never reached the promise land (Num 14:20-23). If we examine the weapons of our welfare, it is about having a total and complete Christian lifestyle (2 Cor 10:4-6; Eph 6:11-18). When we live by God's standard, we have nothing to fear.

Bottom line:

We must not continue to operate under guilt and fear God has not placed on us. Stop trying to please God in your own strength or live with the weight of sin upon you as though you're not good enough or underserving of God's blessing. The word of God says the just shall live faith (Rom 1:17). Live in that truth and come boldly to him, daily (Heb 4:16).
