FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

Entering his rest

Text: Hebrews 3:8-19

Suppose you're invited to live in a country where everyone's commanded not to work for a whole year, after every six years. It begins at the sound of the trumpets. Everything need is provided free of charge and everyone can do what they want. In addition, on the fiftieth year, all debts will be cancelled. How many people will want to live in that country?

Some of us may find something like that impossible. Some may also consider the Sabbath concept impractical, but that was God's initial plan for the Israelites (Lev 25:1-34; 26:27-35; 40-45). Of course, that requires a lot of trust and willingness to depend on God. It isn't surprising therefore, that the Israelites found it difficult. God became angry with them and declared they will never enter his rest (Heb 3:8-19).

Eventually, God forced them to give the land a rest for seventy years (Lev 26:34-35; Jer 29:10; 30:3). During the pandemic lockdown, millions were furloughed and effectively paid not to work. They began to find time for more meaningful pursuits and work-life balance became easier. Although there were some who found it isolating or lonely and some were at risk of domestic abuse, but millions thrived, spending more time with close family members than before.

God gave the Israelites a land flowing with milk and honey and promised them physical rest. The provision was made, but they never took advantage of it. What rest is God talking about? We can see an illustration in the story about Martha and Mary. While Martha was busy worrying about being hospitable, Mary found rest in the presence of Jesus (Lk 10:38-32). God's rest is timely and without stress. It focuses on what's important, tailor-made for each and everyone of us. It is a promise that remains for us too today (Heb 4:9-14).

Jesus called all who labour and are heavy laden to find rest in him and take on his yoke instead (Matt 11:25-30). It is not necessarily about lack of toiling, but what it entails and Jesus declared it is a secret hidden from the wise and prudent, and revealed to babes. That's why Paul found rest in his trust in Christ when he was warned about impending imprisonment (Acts 20:22-24) and Paul supports the notion that rest is about our focus (Acts 20:25-38). Each of us must find the place of our rest in God.

The whole idea of the Sabbath is to allow us to focus only on God. God wants to free us from unnecessary stress about things that may not matter in the long run. He wants us to enter into our rest (Heb 4:11-12). Jesus said the eyes lights the body and when it works well, our whole body is full of light. When it doesn't, we're in darkness (Matt 6:22-23). In the same way, we may be too stressed to give God room in our lives and the kingdom of God is not just about righteousness, but peace and joy in the Holy Spirit (Rom 14:17).

Bottom line:

We can only find rest in God when we allow ourselves to depend on him for all things and in all things. It is only then we find a peace which passes human understanding (Heb 4:9-14; Phil 4:6-7).
