Please ensure you speak to the Pastor or one of today's facilitators before you leave.

May God bless you richly (Amen).

VERSE(S) OF THE DAY

Let love be without hypocrisy. Abhor what is evil. Cling to what is good. Be kindly affectionate to one another with brotherly love, in honor giving preference to one another; not lagging in diligence, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.

Romans 12:9-11 (NKJV)

GROWTH & ADVANCEMENT

Our theme this year is to enlarge and build better (Isalah 54:2-3), and by God's grace, we're trusting that the boundary lines will fall for us in pleasant places (Amen).

FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

Christian view on Qatar world cup criticisms

Text: Matthew 7:1-3

As our text show, it is often easier to point out the wrong in others, as parents, religious leaders, faith groups, politicians, citizens and those in positions of authorities. It's a case of do what I say and not what I do. That may be because it's easier for us to believe others are worse sinners than we are and it makes us feel good (Lk 18:9-14).

Throughout his ministry, Jesus did not shy away from confronting the ills of his day. However, he often presented his messages thoughtfully. For example, he called Pharisees, Scribes and religious leaders hypocrites (Matt 23:13-39; Jn 2:13-22; Lk 18:9-14). Yet, he dined with sinners and had compassion on those he was expected to shun (Matt 9:10-17). He even prayed for his accusers, when they crucified him (Lk 23:34). We're called to live a life worthy of imitation, not to sit in judgement over others (e.g. Matt 7:1-3; 1 Pet 2:21-24). We're also warned to be slow to speak (Js 1:19-20 AMP). The truth is there are often nuances on these issues.

"Love the sinner and hate the sin" may be a mantra we try to practice in the church, but several verses in the bible makes this problematic, some no doubt running afoul of human rights laws by any standard today. They include verses prescribing genocide (Deut 20:16-18), anti-LGBTQ+ (Lev 20:13), banning women as leaders or priests (1 Tim 2:11-12), seeming to accept slavery (Eph 6:5), promote child marriages (Num 31:17-18) or child abuse (Pro 13:2) and so on.

As Christians, we should call out injustices, but we must do so with humility. For one thing, we need to accept there are issues we may never understand or be able to explain and give considerations and allowances to historical contexts and other local nuances. Societal laws evolve, for good or bad. We may need to adjust our views accordingly, provided they're not in violation of God's standard and authority (2 Tim 2:19; Acts 5:29).

Often we're less than effective in our evangelism because our words are at dissonance with our lives and actions and this has been pointed out by some in the Qatar scenario. We should avoid knee-jack emotive reactions that may be ineffective, do in-depth research if necessary, before we contribute anything towards the discourse. We must also align our responses with the word of God and allowing the Holy Spirit to guide us. Jesus left us the Holy Spirit, both to convict us and for that reason (John 16:7-13).

Although Jesus challenged the injustices of his day and the sinfulness around him, many couldn't ignore him, first because he was without sin and also because his messages are presented with nuances and compassion (Matt 7:28-29; 1 Pet 2:22-23). We should ensure we're not hypocrites, so that we can act as light and salt in our communities.

Bottom line:

If we want people to listen to what we've got to say, we must be perfect, in our thoughts, words and deeds, just like our heavenly father (Matt 5:48).
