FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

Celebrate the word of God

Text: 2 Thessalonians 3:1 (AMP)

Paul prayed in this verse that the "word of the Lord" will "spread rapidly and be honoured" (AMP). Once, some asked Jeremiah to tell them the word of the Lord, promising to do whatever it says. When he told them however, they balked. In contrast, when the angel appeared to the Mary to give her what he called "glad tidings" about having a son out of wedlock, Mary's response was that God's word be fulfilled in her life (Lk 1:30-38).

However, it was clear the word given to Mary wasn't palatable, convenient or well understood. So, she went to her cousin, Elizabeth for confirmation and once she got one, praised God in submission. Do we celebrate God's word in our lives? There may be some truths we know or should know, that when expressed in a certain way, catches our attention. There may also be information that we need and don't yet know. It could also mean God will not be able to do what he needs to do through us, if we don't know them.

We see this in the story of Daniel who discovered a prophesy that the captivity of Israel will end in the seventieth year. It is interesting that he found out about this in the sixty-ninth year and began to pray for its fulfilment (Dan 9:1-3). This wasn't an accident. Like Daniel, there may be times the Holy Spirit prompts us to pray for something that hasn't happened yet. That's one of the most powerful impetus we can have to seek God, because it is not a prayer of desperation and often, do not arise from fearfulness.

The Psalmist shows us how to extol and celebrate the word of God, and Psalm 119 may be considered a love letter to God. For example, David yearned to get to a place where his life consistently aligns and mirrors God's word (e.g. Psa 119:4-6; Jn 2:5). In another place, he maintains God's word is without limits (e.g. Psa 119:96-99). Like him, we must delight ourselves in the word of God always because it is not everyone that God trusts with his revelation or such fore-knowledge (Matt 13:11-14).

Most of us have gadgets in our possession and we often don't know the full extent of their functionality or power. We cannot treat the word of God that way. This year, we must resolve to discover everything God wants to reveal to us, prayerfully. Once we do, we must act and also honour and celebrate the word of God. One way to do that is to pray and fast, trusting that God who gave us the word is able to fulfil his purpose in us.

Know that only God knows where he's taking each of us. In the life of every Christian, change begins with the word of God and that comes with knowledge about what we must do at a certain point in time. It isn't often about skills or cleverness (Zech 4:6). Let's make this year a journey of discovery and allow God to give us the knowledge we need at the right time, about what to do, where to do it and how to achieve maximum impact etc (Jn 4:10).

Bottom line:

When God gives us prophetic word of knowledge about something ahead (1 Cor 12:8), it is so we can do something about it. Take action, honour it and celebrate the word of God.
