FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

The living (Part II)

Text: Isaiah 38:18-20

Last week, we talked about increasing the decibel of our praise. However, that's not to say praise equals noise. Noise can be part of praise, but it is not about the noise. We need to find the right level of praise in our lives for God. For example, the place was shaken with the intensity when the early church prayed together and the scriptures said they were filled with the Holy Spirit (Acts 4:31). Recently, Scotland football fans were so happy to qualify for the World Cup they almost brought the house down with their noise.

However, when Hezekiah stated that only the living can praise the Lord (Isa 38:19), it suggested a lasting transformation's taken place, but his subsequent attitude didn't match his expressions (2 Chr 32:24-25). How many times did we soon forget when God answers our heartfelt prayers? Our praise and gratitude shouldn't be tied to events. It should be a continuous state (Jn 4:24).

Note that Jesus did not honour every invitation made to him, but he chose to visit Simon's house (Lk 7:36). Yet, Simon didn't really appreciate the magnitude of Jesus's presence, but an uninvited woman did and showed her gratitude by breaking a jar of rare perfume, anointing and washing his feet with her tears (Lk 7:37-48). What's the value of the debt we owe Christ? It will determine the level of our praise.

We had a terminal illness called "sin", under condemnation of death, but Christ paid the price to redeem us. How much praise do you think he's worth and what should our lives reflect? Hezekiah had a lot to say about his gratitude to God after he was healed (Isa 38:9; 10; 12-13; 14; 16; 18; 20). Yet, he later became proud (2 Chr 32:25). How about you? For one woman, it was a costly perfume, and for a poor widow, it was two mites (Lk 21:1-4).

Bottom line:

It takes a lot of reflective effort to express genuine praise and worship to God. We must ask ourselves today. Have we become proud or do we understand all we are and have belong to him (1 Chr 29:14; Deut 8:1-4; 18).
